

Ilan Kernerman @ lexicography in brief

I joined Kernerman Publishing in 1991 to coordinate its semi-bilingual English learner's dictionary series abroad, and learnt about lexicography, ELT, publishing and business administration. In 1996 I left and continued with Password Publishers, renamed K Dictionaries in 2000, extending to digital lexicography. We develop multi-language lexical resources and tools and cooperate with publishing, ICT and academic partners worldwide. My main interests include pedagogical, multilingual and historical lexicography, the interoperability of lexicography with language technology and diversified usages, and language in society.

Since 1994 I edit and publish the annual Kernerman Dictionary News. I have co-edited and published Lexicography in Asia (1998, with Tom McArthur) and English Learners' Dictionaries at the DSNA 2009 (2010, with Paul Bogaards), and am guest co-editor (with Arleta Adamska-Safasiak) of the special issue on Bilingual Learners' Dictionaries of the International Journal of Lexicography (forthcoming 2016, 29.3). I have been involved with Asialex since its inception in 1997 and currently serve as its president and as associate editor of Lexicography-Journal of Asialex. I talk at conferences, universities and language institutes, and this year began an initiative for fully international lexicography cooperation called Globalex.
